this global brother/sisterhood of ours and their meaningful and interesting lives . . . Some sad news: Dr. Josef Cada died last May. After more than a decade of correspondence, I finally had the opportunity of meeting and visiting with him and his wife in their Prague home during Easter 1977. It's a great loss . . . I still haven't completed my UCLA dissertation. It's very hard for a foreigner and disabled person to get a job here. (They've never heard of affirmative action here. There isn't any legislation on discrimination either. You see, it just doesn't exist and therefore there isn't any need for legal action.)" *Adolf D.
